Whilst playing with the windows operating system, Vista coming in 2007 and decided to check in my Media Center PC could handle me dual booting with Vista.

I first needed to confirm my latest hardware really would work under Vista and the drivers which it comes with. This proved to be alot easier than I thought due to WIKI, the online encyclopaedia has a URL with just this information.

The link to the Vista RC1 Hardware Compatibility List is here.

This has saved me alot of time and now I just monitor the manufacturer sites for the hardware in my MCE which is not on the list, like my new Hauppauge Nova-T-500-MCE dual Freeview Tuner card (argh!).
